EDITO

DRC TRAVEL MEET organized by YEBO DRC was born from a simple conviction: the Democratic Republic of the Congo possesses exceptional tourism, cultural, and economic potential—yet this potential requires greater structure and promotion, as well as stronger connections to global stakeholders. Through this initiative, we aim to create a platform where professionals from the tourism, travel, hospitality, aviation, finance, and technology sectors—alongside public institutions and investors—can meet, exchange ideas, and collaboratively build concrete opportunities.

Each edition of DRC TRAVEL MEET thus serves as an opportunity to showcase our country's wealth while forging connections between talent, businesses, and markets.

THE VISION

Our vision is to make DRC TRAVEL MEET a leading platform for promoting the DRC as a destination and developing business relationships centered on tourism in Africa.

GAYLORD KASAYI - CEO YEBO
DRC TRAVEL MEET

We aim to help reshape perceptions of our country—not only by showcasing its landscapes, culture, and heritage, but also by highlighting the men and women who build its tourism industry day in and day out.

DRC TRAVEL MEET is designed as a forum for dialogue, networking, promotion, and action: a place where ideas turn into collaborations and where connections between stakeholders can help create a DRC destination that is more visible, more accessible, and better connected to the world.

Mme Jolie YOMBO - DRC Tourism Board CEO and Mr Gaylord KASAYI, CEO Of DRC TRAVEL MEET.

A STRATEGIC INSTITUTIONAL COLLABORATION

The collaboration between DRC TRAVEL MEET and the National Tourism Office (ONT) is part of an initiative to promote and showcase the Democratic Republic of the Congo as a destination. Through this partnership, we aim to boost the visibility of the country's tourism, cultural, and natural assets among travelers, tourism professionals, and international partners.

This collaboration also helps create a favorable environment for connecting industry stakeholders, promoting Congolese tourism offerings, and attracting investors interested in the opportunities the DRC presents. By combining tourism promotion, professional networking, and institutional dialogue, DRC TRAVEL MEET and the ONT are helping to raise the profile of the DRC as a destination with immense potential and a market ripe for tourism investment opportunities.

DRC TRAVEL MEET also engages in dialogue with national institutions—notably the Ministry of Tourism and the Office of the President—to contribute to the development and promotion of the tourism sector in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. This collaboration creates a forum for interaction among public authorities, private operators, investors, international partners, and stakeholders across the tourism value chain.

Mme Jolie YOMBO MUKENDI
Director General of the DRC Tourism board

Leadership attuned to the private sector

Ms. Jolie Yombo, Director General of the National Tourism Office (ONT), attended the 3rd edition of the DRC Travel Meet as the event's patron and an official partner. Through this commitment, the ONT reaffirmed its support for initiatives aimed at promoting the DRC as a destination, fostering closer ties among industry stakeholders, and stimulating dialogue on tourism development.

As patron, Ms. Jolie Yombo supported this edition, which focused on collaboration and showcasing the potential of the Congolese tourism sector. Her engagement with the professionals, partners, and institutions in attendance fostered dialogue regarding the opportunities, challenges, and future prospects of tourism in the DRC. DRC Travel Meet thus commends the commitment of the ONT and its Director General to building a more visible, connected, and attractive destination in the DRC.

In just two days across two venues, DRC TRAVEL MEET succeeded in mobilizing a wide range of stakeholders from the tourism, transport, finance, hospitality, and media sectors.

ONE EDITION, ONE VISION

The 2026 edition of DRC TRAVEL MEET takes place against a backdrop where the Democratic Republic of the Congo possesses exceptional tourism potential, yet the visibility of its destinations, the structuring of its tourism offering, and the connecting of industry stakeholders remain major challenges.

While fostering better collaboration among institutions, businesses, travel professionals, and tourism promotion stakeholders.

Focused on promoting the DRC as a destination, developing travel, and creating business opportunities, this edition aimed to bring together key public and private sector stakeholders in travel and tourism, foster professional exchanges, showcase Congolese tourism offerings, and facilitate connections with international investors and partners.

THE PRESIDENCY OFFICE

SEM. Ephraim KAYOKA, Advisor to the Head of State on the Environment.

The participation of the Office of the President of the Republic in DRC TRAVEL MEET 2026 demonstrated the importance placed on tourism development, the promotion of the DRC as a destination, and the country's appeal. This institutional presence also served to strengthen dialogue among private sector stakeholders, public institutions, and partners committed to the development of the Congolese tourism sector.

SEM. Eddy LUKUNA WABANTU, Advisor to the Head of State in charge of tourism, the arts, and religious affairs.

The official opening of DRC TRAVEL MEET 2026 by a representative of the Office of the President marked a highlight of this edition. It kicked off two days dedicated to dialogue, networking, and business opportunities, while placing the promotion of tourism and travel at the heart of the discussions.

REP. OF BURUNDI

The presence of the Ambassador of the Republic of Burundi to the DRC contributed to discussions regarding opportunities for collaboration, mobility, and the promotion of destinations within the Great Lakes region.

SEM. Agricole Mwamba Ntirampeba, Ambassador Plenipotentiary of Burundi to the DRC.

THE DIASPORA

The participation of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs—responsible notably for the Diaspora and La Francophonie—brought an international dimension to the discussions at DRC TRAVEL MEET.

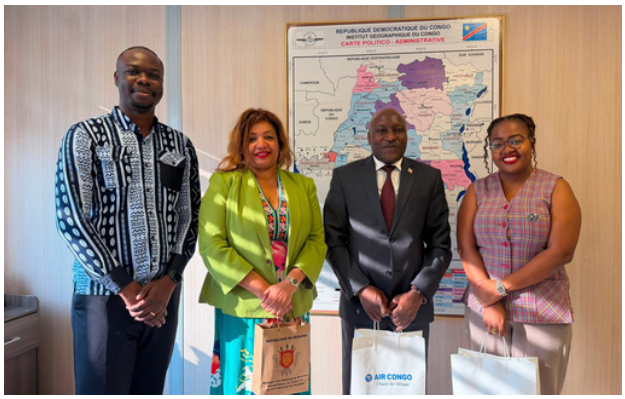

SEM. Laurent Tawuniya, Chief of Staff to the Minister Delegate for Foreign Affairs, the Diaspora, and La Francophonie.

Burundi's participation in DRC TRAVEL MEET 2026 was a highlight of the event, reinforcing its regional dimension. Burundi was represented by Ms. Armelle Irakoze, Director General of Tourism at the country's Ministry of Tourism, who attended to share her expertise and contribute to discussions on tourism sector development.

Her presence helped highlight opportunities for cooperation between the DRC and Burundi in tourism, travel, and destination promotion. The interactions also fostered closer ties between professionals and institutions from both countries.
This participation exemplifies DRC TRAVEL MEET's commitment to building bridges among tourism stakeholders in the Great Lakes region.

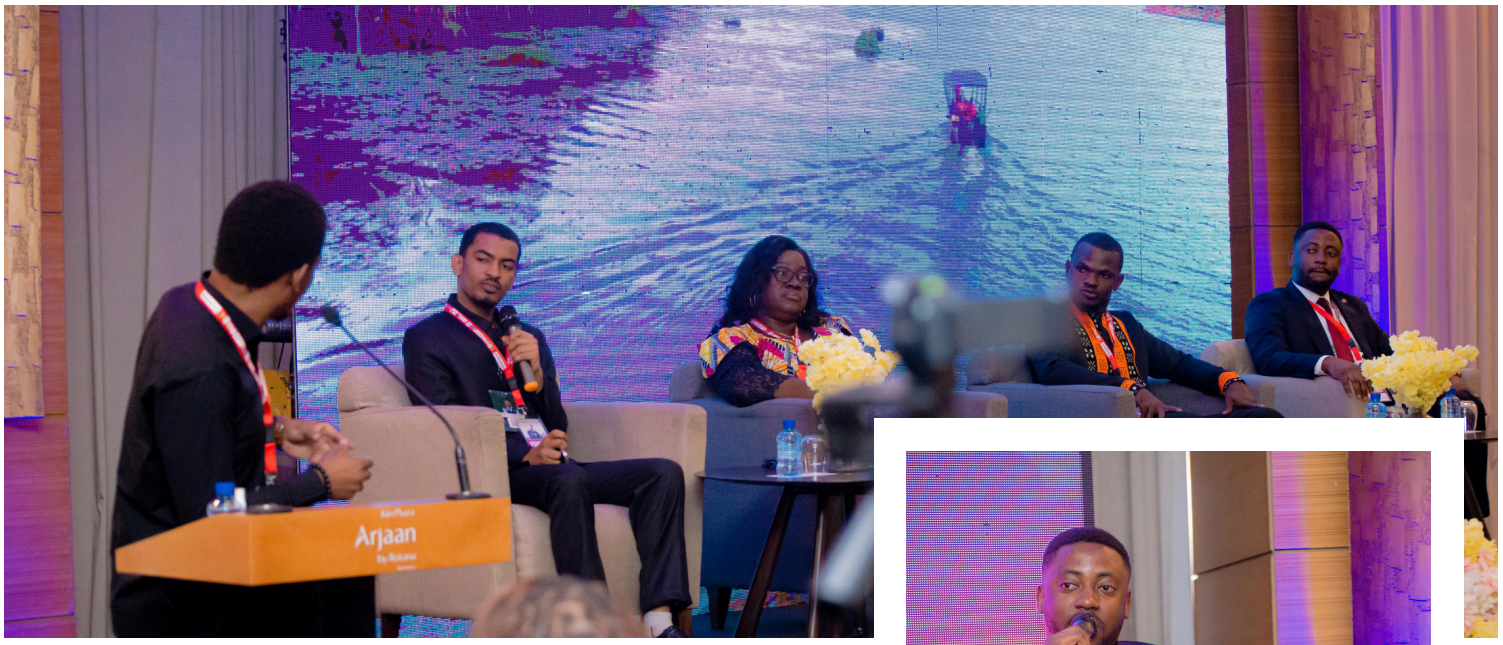

Launch of an air route between Kinshasa and Bujumbura with Air Congo.

The plan to launch a direct air link between Kinshasa and Bujumbura via Air Congo opens up new prospects for regional connectivity and the development of exchanges between the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Burundi.

Such a link could facilitate travel for individuals, tourism professionals, and business operators, while helping to boost trade and tourism between the two countries.

THE VOICES DRIVING TOURISM FORWARD

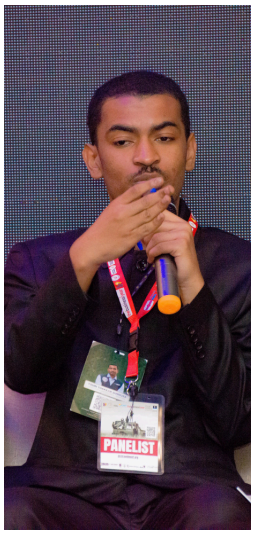

Day 1 – Panel 1: Innovation and digital transformation for African tourism.

The discussion covered the digital transformation of the tourism sector, booking and marketing platforms, technology and the traveler experience, strategic partnerships in digital tourism, destination digital marketing, and opportunities for African startups.

With our panelists and experts including Mr. Jeremie Elonga, Mr. Derfina Kabongo, Mr. Youri Sungunza and Ms. Nicole Diampasi.

Recommendation: accelerate the digitalization of the Congolese tourism ecosystem.

The DRC would benefit from implementing a national strategy for the digitalization of tourism, equipping public and private stakeholders with modern tools for booking, marketing, and destination promotion. The development of interconnected digital platforms, along with the use of data, digital marketing, and new technologies, should enhance the traveler experience, boost the visibility of Congolese destinations, and create more opportunities for local startups and technology companies.

This transformation should also foster collaboration among institutions, airlines, hotels, travel agencies, guides, tour operators, and technology firms.

Day 1 – Panel 2: "Culture, Creativity, and Destination Branding."

Discussions focused on culture as a driver of tourism appeal, destination creativity and identity, storytelling and the image of Africa, the branding of African destinations, and the intersection of arts, fashion, music, and tourism.

How can a strong international image be built for the DRC?

With our panelists and experts, including Ms. Pamela Landreville, Mr. Francis Tuyala, Ms. Gladys Lomete, and Ms. Sonia Lebe.

Recommendation: Develop a national branding and storytelling strategy for the DRC as a destination.

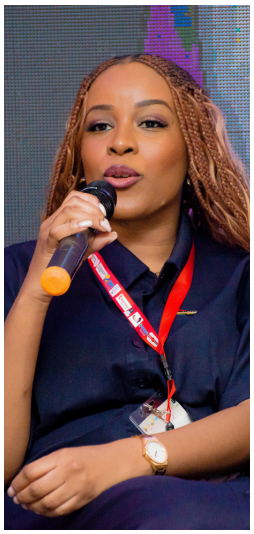

Culture, the arts, music, fashion, gastronomy, and heritage must be further integrated into the DRC's tourism promotion strategy to build a strong and coherent destination identity.

The DRC possesses significant cultural and creative assets that can be transformed into tourism experiences, digital content, and products marketable on African and international markets.

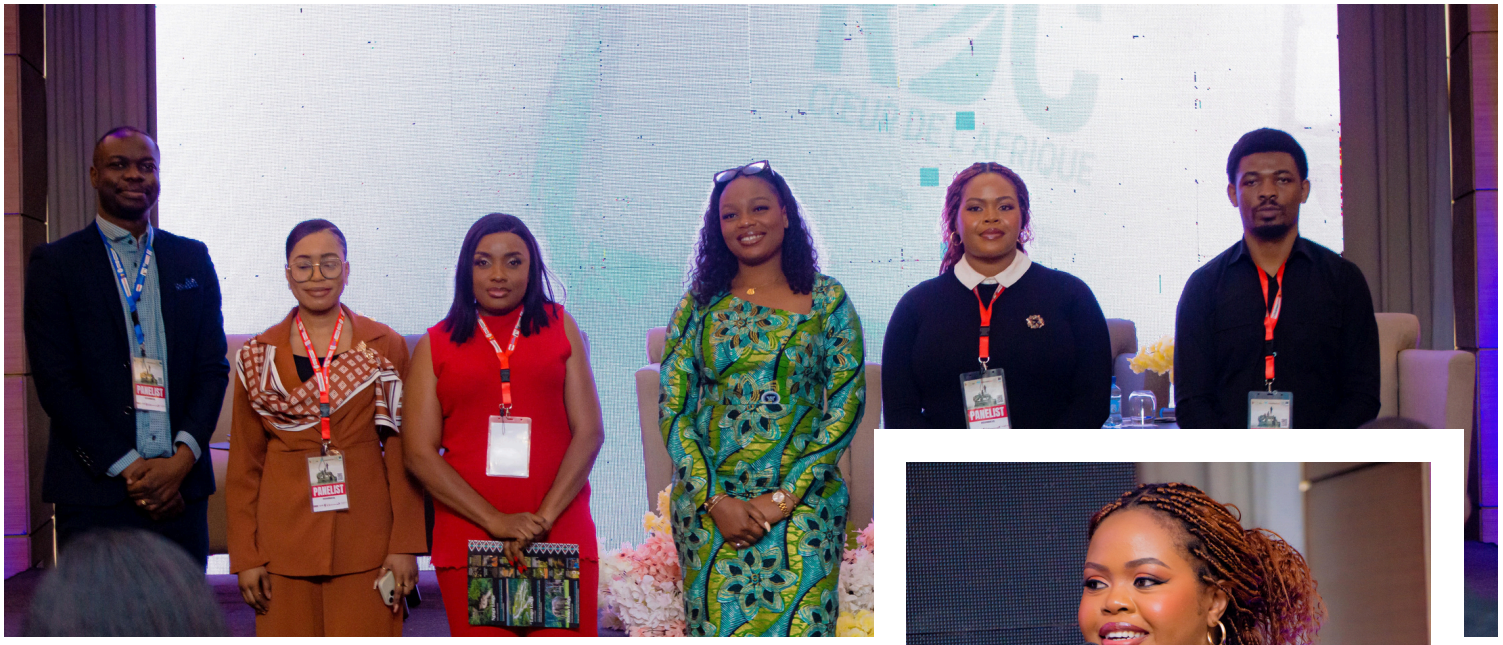

A coordinated strategy involving institutions, tourism professionals, artists, creators, the media, and the diaspora would make it possible to showcase an attractive, authentic, and diverse DRC.

Day 1 – Panel 3: "Youth, education, and careers in tourism."

Discussions focused on the following topics:

- Youth employment in tourism
- Vocational training and emerging professions in the sector
- Tourism entrepreneurship
- Opportunities for young people
- Startups and innovation
- Collaboration between training institutions and businesses

With our panelists and experts, including Ms. Sandra Brandine, Ms. Laetitia Mbelu, Ms. Grace Kiku, and Ms. Laetitia Kabunda.

Recommendation: create a genuine bridge between training, employment, and tourism entrepreneurship.

Developing tourism in the DRC must go hand in hand with substantial investment in youth skills and emerging professions within the sector. Training institutions should strengthen their partnerships with hotels, travel agencies, airlines, tour operators, and startups to offer training programs better aligned with market needs—particularly in areas such as digital technology, hospitality, tourism marketing, experience design, and new technologies. Developing programs for internships, work-study placements, business incubation, and entrepreneurial support could transform the demographic potential of Congolese youth into a genuine engine for tourism growth.

Day 1 – Panel 4: "Sustainable tourism, conservation, and community impact"

The discussion addressed issues surrounding sustainable tourism, biodiversity conservation, ecotourism, community-based tourism, the protection of natural resources, and economic benefits for local communities.

With our panelists and experts including Ms. Iris Thiriaux, Mr. ALLAN LOFOLI, Ms. Keutlwang Reid, Ms. Deborah Lomboto and Ms. Suzy Nzuzi

Recommendation: Make sustainable and community-based tourism a pillar of destination development in the Congo.

The DRC should strengthen tourism models that combine biodiversity conservation, local economic development, and the creation of responsible visitor experiences.

Protected areas, natural sites, and local communities must be integrated into tourism value chains to ensure that economic benefits more effectively reach the populations living around these sites.

Developing ecotourism and community-based tourism products—supported by conservation and impact-monitoring mechanisms—could simultaneously contribute to protecting natural heritage and developing local economies.

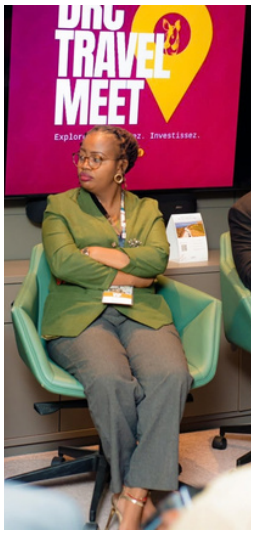

Day 2 – Panel 5: "How to transform Africa's tourism potential into real, sustainable economic growth."

The discussion focused on the following points:

1. Which investments are priorities?
2. How can the business environment be improved?
3. How can more investors be attracted?
4. How can jobs be created through tourism?
5. How can local value chains be developed?

With our panelists and experts, including Ms. Benie Kiese, Mr. Alain Bokoso, Ms. Armelle Irakoze, and Mr. Jonathan Kabongo.

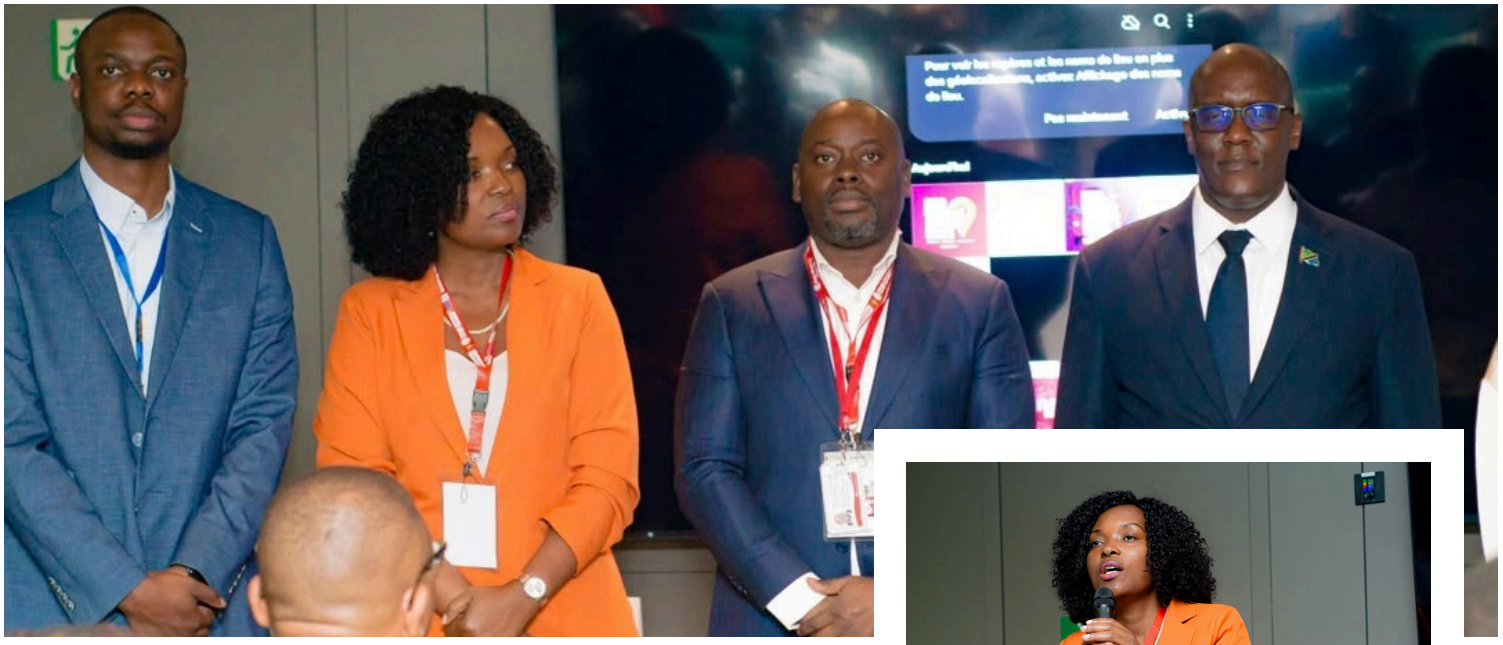

Recommendation: create a more favorable environment for investment and structure tourism value chains.

The DRC must transform its immense tourism potential into concrete economic opportunities by facilitating private investment, improving the business environment, and developing infrastructure tailored to the sector's needs.

A value-chain approach would better connect hotels, travel agencies, transport providers, airlines, tourist sites, local producers, artisans, restaurants, and service providers. This structuring would help attract more investors, create jobs, and turn tourism into a sector capable of generating sustainable economic benefits across the entire country.

Day 2 – Panel 6: "Air Connectivity and Regional Mobility."

Discussions focused on the challenges of improving air connectivity and mobility to accelerate the development of tourism in the Congo and across Africa. Key topics included:

- Air transport
- Regional routes and connections
- Travel costs and visas
- Destination accessibility
- Airline cooperation
- Tourist mobility and travel facilitation

With our panelists and experts, including Mr. Kenneth Lukaija, Mr. Christian Bukam, and Ms. Marie Ange Lundu.

Recommendation: Make air connectivity a strategic driver of tourism development in the DRC.

Improving air connectivity and regional mobility must be a priority to facilitate access to various Congolese destinations and boost intra-African tourism.
The DRC should encourage cooperation among airlines, the opening of new routes, the improvement of regional connections, and the pursuit of solutions to make travel more affordable and time-efficient.
Better connectivity between Kinshasa, major Congolese cities, and key African destinations would help facilitate travel for tourists, professionals, and investors.

The 13 challenges

- Low level of digitalization among tourism stakeholders: many businesses still need to modernize their booking, payment, management, and marketing tools.
- Platform and data fragmentation: the lack of a sufficiently integrated digital ecosystem limits the visibility and commercialization of tourism offerings.
- Access to skills and technology funding: tourism startups and SMEs require digital expertise, support, and funding to develop their solutions.
- Lack of consistency in destination messaging: various stakeholders need to convey more coordinated messages regarding the DRC brand.
- Under-commercialization of cultural heritage: many cultural and creative assets have yet to be transformed into structured tourism experiences and products.
- Insufficient international visibility: promotion of the destination needs to increase its presence in African and international markets, particularly through diaspora networks.
- Visa and air travel costs: travel expenses can restrict tourist and business mobility, requiring solutions that involve the entire aviation ecosystem and entail a reduction in visa fees and other airport taxes.
- Mismatch between training and market needs: the skills taught must better align with the operational realities of tourism businesses.
- Limited access to initial work experience: young people need more internships, work-study programs, and integration initiatives.
- Lack of sustainable tourism infrastructure: several sites require visitor facilities, access, and services that meet the standards of responsible tourism.
- Limited economic participation by local communities: local populations need to be more fully integrated into the jobs, services, and value chains generated by tourism.
- Balancing visitor numbers with conservation: growth in visitor numbers must be accompanied by mechanisms to ensure the long-term preservation of natural resources.
- Underdeveloped local value chains: stronger links need to be forged between tourism businesses and local producers, entrepreneurs, and service providers.

ENCOUNTERS THAT CREATE OPPORTUNITIES

Over the course of the two days, tour operators, airlines, hotels, financial institutions, businesses, media outlets, and institutional partners had the opportunity to discuss their offerings, needs, and projects directly.

> The right people at the right table.
> Concrete business opportunities, lasting partnerships, and joint projects

These meetings made it possible to initiate new collaborations and strengthen relationships among various stakeholders in the travel and tourism ecosystem in the DRC and the region.

DRC TRAVEL MEET 2026 served as a genuine platform for professional encounters, networking, and the creation of business opportunities.

BUSINESS

The DRC Travel Meet 2026 also featured B2B exchanges with public institutions—notably the Ministry of Foreign Affairs—regarding matters related to the Francophonie and the diaspora.

These meetings provided an opportunity to address the role of the diaspora and Francophone networks in developing tourism, economic, and cultural exchanges between the DRC, Africa, and international markets.
These discussions paved the way for improved collaboration between institutional and private-sector stakeholders.

The B2B meetings also fostered direct exchanges among tourism operators, public authorities, institutions, airlines, and stakeholders in the tourism ecosystem.

Discussions with representatives from the Presidency, the National Tourism Office (ONT), and airlines enabled industry professionals to present their realities, needs, and opportunities for collaboration directly to decision-makers and strategic partners.

THE IMPACT OF A DIASPORA?

The return of the Congolese diaspora represents a genuine opportunity to strengthen economic, tourism, and cultural exchanges between the DRC and the rest of the world. Through its skills, experience, and international networks, the diaspora helps forge new connections and further enhance the appeal of the DRC as a destination.

The diaspora with Equity BCDC

Through tailored financial solutions, Equity BCDC supports the Congolese diaspora in its investment, entrepreneurship, and return-home initiatives. These tools facilitate money transfers, access to banking services, and the realization of projects linking the diaspora with the DRC.

This contribution reinforces the diaspora's role as an economic player and a partner in the development of the DRC.

Soul voyage

Led by Sonia Lebel, the Soul Voyage agency participated in the DRC Travel Meet, highlighting its commitment to developing travel and tourism experiences.

Participation that also fosters exchanges between professionals and the development of collaborations within the Congolese tourism ecosystem.

MWANA MBOKA - Le Jeu

Led by Ms. Tiphanie Futu, this initiative offers a fun and original way to discover the DRC, its heritage, its culture, and its riches. The project illustrates how creativity and innovation can help raise the profile of the Congo as a destination.

PAMELA LANDREVILLE

DRC TOURISM AMBASSADOR

Ms. Pamela Landreville, Tourism Ambassador for the DRC, attended the 3rd edition of the DRC Travel Meet, contributing to discussions focused on showcasing and developing the Democratic Republic of the Congo as a travel destination. Her participation reflects her commitment to promoting the country's tourism potential and enhancing its visibility among industry professionals and partners.

Alongside other experts and industry stakeholders, Ms. Pamela Landreville participated in discussions regarding culture, creativity, and the branding of African destinations. These exchanges focused notably on building a strong international image for the DRC, showcasing its identity, and the role of creativity in tourism appeal.

Through her participation in the DRC Travel Meet, Ms. Pamela Landreville helped convey a vision of the DRC as an open, appealing destination, rich in its diverse regions, culture, and heritage. The DRC Travel Meet extends its sincere thanks to her for her commitment and her contribution to discussions aimed at boosting the promotion of the DRC as a destination and strengthening connections among various tourism stakeholders.
